REIN Center conducting meeting

Times Staff Report

CLAY CITY — The REIN Center Coalition is inviting all to attend its meeting at 7 p.m. today, in the REIN Center Community Library, 700 Main St., Clay City.

For several months, REIN Center members and students at Indiana State University have been working toward the publication of the Clay City-Harrison Township Park and Recreation Master Plan for Recreation, Education, Information and Nutrition.

A copy of the master plan is available at the REIN Center Community Library for public use Wednesdays and Fridays from 1-4 p.m.

The plan includes a population analysis, a summary of the library survey, community development asset map, priority projects and associated costs, audit and recommendations for the playground and the Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology REIN Center Site Design Requirements, Options and Summary.

With state approval, the center will be able to apply for additional grants to build the community center as well as improve playground equipment and other recreation offerings in Harrison Township.

This copy is from The Brazil Times; I sent an identical one to The Clay City News, which also appeared last week.
