ISA Internships are more than just a placement!

The purpose of an internship is to gain relevant skills in your field of interest while gaining experience for your resume, and this definition holds true regardless of where in the world you are.

Discover yourself and your career while transitioning into your profession.

1

By stepping out of your comfort zone in a foreign country, you will have the opportunity to truly discover yourself, both professionally and personally. An internship is a great way to prepare yourself for the working world by learning how to communicate in a professional and cross-cultural setting with a supervisor or colleagues, asking questions and seeking advice, while helping determine your career path. Maybe you will find the area within your field you like best, or that your job isn't what you thought it would be and it's time to make a career change before graduation.

Stand out from the crowd.

2

An international internship will not only give you talking points to make you a stand-out candidate, but it shows that you are globally aware and aren't afraid of getting out of your comfort zone for success. Employers want employees who have a global-mindset, can take initiative, and are unafraid of challenges or risks.

Gain soft skills with an international understanding.

Businesses know that soft skills are often not learned in the classroom or from textbooks, but are a result of workplace experience. Employers have expressed the need for applicants to possess skills such as innovation, creativity, problem solving, global perspective, critical thinking, collaboration, and self-management when entering into the workforce, yet employers consistently report deficiencies in these skills among its applicant pool. An internship abroad will provide you the opportunity to apply some of the hard skills you've learned while at university during your day-to-day responsibilities, as well as the opportunity to develop the equally-important soft skills that employers are looking for in their future employees.

Learn about your career field from a global perspective, and pick up a new language.

4

An internship abroad will allow you to develop a broader understanding of the world, current events, and topics related to your own field of study. This will help you to view future challenges differently and solve problems from a different perspective. Your new understanding of another culture and global market can make you more valuable and marketable to future employers.

Go abroad and stay on track by earning academic credit.

5

Whether your university requires international experience, an internship, or you are just seeking upper-level course credit, you can choose to add on credit through Carroll College, our School of Record, for your international internship.

WE CUSTOM MATCH INTERNSHIPS TO MEET YOUR INDIVIDUAL GOALS

STEP 1

It starts with an advising session.

ISA Internships utilizes an advising session to identify and record the internship goals of each individual and to review each applicant's résumé and cover letter. From there, ISA will find the best-matched internship for each student.

Q&A

Will my international internship be paid?

ISA Internships are unpaid experiences with the option to receive academic credit.

Can I create a custom date internship?

Absolutely! For more information, see page 28 or call us at (512) 480-8522.

Can I choose my internship placement?

During your one-on-one advising session with your Program Manager you will discuss your interests, skills and career goals together, as well as the three career fields you selected on your online application. ISA will do our best to match you with a host company/organization that meets your goals and interests; however, we cannot guarantee a specific placement with any one company or organization.

What if I don't see my area of interest on your website?

The internships listed on our website are examples of what participants have completed in the past. They will give you an idea of the range of placements we can accommodate in each career field. However, these are by no means the only types of internships offered! Participants will be matched with an internship that suits their unique interests, qualifications and goals.

How long is the placement process?

Since we strive to match you with an internship that meets your personal and professional goals, the process of finding your internship can take between 2 to 8 weeks after you've had your advising session.

Will I receive more than one offer for an internship?

Participants rarely receive multiple offers. The goal of our unique one-on-one advising session is to understand more about your internship interests and goals so that our placement teams know which type of host company/organization will be your best fit. Therefore, the offer presented is the best match based on your preferences and goals.

Is my housing included?

Yes, housing is included in all programs. Depending on the location, the following housing options are available:

- Homestays
- Apartments
- Resident halls

Learn more about the housing options in each location on page 8.

What is a typical commute to the internship site?

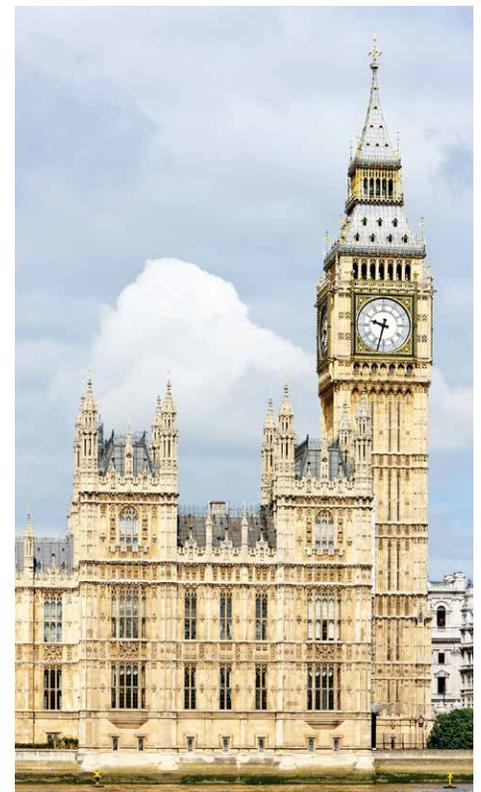

As is typical in any large city around the world, commute times can vary from a brisk 10-minute walk to an hour on the city's local transportation. An integral part of immersing yourself in your new home is traveling like a local, so embrace your morning commute!

Can I participate if I have already graduated university?

Yes! Recent college graduates, as well as non-traditional participants, are welcome to apply. However, due to different visa restrictions, not all program locations may be an option for you.

Rebecca Ederer

SANTIAGO, CHILE

Rebecca majored in Film Studies and had already completed a domestic internship in the United States. For her international internship, Rebecca was excited to explore Chile, further her videography skills and practice Spanish—including learning Spanish terms specific to her career.

“I am privileged to be able to practice my craft in such a supportive work environment and receive constant encouragement to push myself farther and learn from mistakes. Every person’s experience will be different, which I think is wonderful; you will never have a ‘typical’ trip through Chile.”

TASKS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Rebecca was responsible for the production and editing of corporate short videos, development of social media plans and content, and the management of the Instagram and YouTube channel content. Based in Santiago, Rebecca filmed the local city and traveled to other parts of Chile to capture its beauty and promote sustainable travel for Latitud90.

Libby Gibson

HAMILTON ISLAND, AUSTRALIA

With a degree in Hospitality and Tourism Management, Libby was excited to learn more about the industry in Australia while advancing her soft skills during her internship. She went into her internship looking for an experience that would better her chances of getting a position in a hotel after graduation. However, her internship steered her towards a new career path of wedding and special event planning.

“Each wedding that I worked on was different, and helped me work with problem-solving skills when situations came up... I was trusted to run a full wedding at the end of my internship from the pre-wedding meeting to the end of their reception. I have never had an employer have this much trust in my ability to do my job before, so it was incredible when I got to the end of the day and knew everything had run smoothly.”

TASKS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Libby’s internship at Hamilton Island Weddings allowed her to be involved in various aspects of the wedding planning process. Her duties included phone inquiries, processing new booking files, creating postal correspondence, picking up cakes, coordinating floral arrangements, and assisting the wedding photographer and planners.

For Faculty and Advisors: Custom Internship Programs

ISA is able to develop custom programs for faculty members and study abroad advisors in search of customized internship experiences for their students.

1

Signature Programs

Rebranding existing ISA Internship programs with your institution's name ensures that the promotion and application processes carry your brand. Select just one or multiple program locations to meet the needs of one or more academic departments on campus.

Additionally, your university can tailor certain elements of an existing program to meet specific learning objectives, such as excursions, guest lectures and academic curricula. This can include customizing internship dates too!

One of the great things about an ISA Internship signature program is that there is seldom a minimum enrollment required, eliminating the stress of making sure you have enough students for your program to run. We can move forward with an ISA Internships program with just one student without it affecting the program fee.

Examples Include:

- Business and Communications Internships in New Zealand
- Research-based Internships in Australia, Chile and New Zealand
- Engineering Internships in Santiago, Chile
- Healthcare Internships in Valencia, Spain

2

Faculty-Led

Create a different kind of study abroad experience for your students by including an international internship. ISA Internships can arrange Custom-Date Internships to meet your institution's needs by embedding or adding-on an internship component to a faculty-led program.

1. Allow us to place students with host companies and organizations in one of our program locations and have your university faculty teach an academic course on the ground with the students.
2. Add an internship of four or more weeks to the end of an existing faculty-led study abroad program. This model allows students to learn about a particular region or industry sector prior to beginning their full-time internships. Faculty can stay for as long or as little of the program as desired.

Examples Include:

- 3-week faculty-led Communications and Journalism course, followed by 8-week internships in Communications and Journalism in Sydney, Australia
- 8-week Business in China course with concurrent full-time Business internships in Shanghai
- 3-week Communications and Mass Media faculty-led course in New Zealand followed by 6-week internships in Australia

“The University of South Carolina has had a wonderful experience working with ISA Internships. The ISA Internships team has helped us set up an incredibly complicated internship program for our Exercise Science students, and they were very considerate and meticulous in determining what would be the best options for placements. Our students need hands-on internship experience and ISA Internships worked hard and very quickly to make that happen. Having worked with ISA for a number of years, I can say from experience that they are consummate professionals and they always keep the student experience first and foremost on their priority list.”

The ISA Difference

Bridging Cultures Program

The Bridging Cultures Program (BCP) encompasses the ISA on-site orientation delivered to all students in the first days of their ISA program, with key improvements in areas related to goal setting, intercultural awareness, diversity and professional development. For a number of reasons, the first days that follow a student's arrival on site offer us some of the best opportunities to effectively transmit information to program participants. While the pre-departure orientations that students receive from ISA and their home universities are also important, students are typically more ready to focus on their study abroad experience when they arrive at their host country.

The BCP is designed to help ISA make the most of this important opportunity to educate students, and to give students the tools that will facilitate discovery and learning during their program. The BCP is an important introduction to a new culture, home and experience. The BCP is designed to prepare students for a successful, positive and rewarding experience that will influence the rest of their lives.

ISA Discovery Model

A primary objective of all ISA programs is to facilitate the learning and development of students. We rely on host universities to provide quality instruction in the classroom, but ISA is the main facilitator of learning outside of the classroom. Our efforts to promote student learning are shaped by an educational framework we call the ISA Discovery Model. According to this model, student learning and development is organized into five areas of discovery:

1. INTERCULTURAL
2. HISTORICAL
3. SOCIOPOLITICAL
4. PROFESSIONAL
5. ENVIRONMENTAL

Throughout the duration of all ISA programs, we provide participants opportunities to pursue guided learning in these five areas of discovery through participation in ISA excursions, cultural activities and community involvement.

DISCOVERY MODEL TYPE	EXAMPLES
 Intercultural ISA aims to increase student intercultural competence in cross-cultural settings.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Introduce theories of intercultural development and communication to our students prior to departure and on site during the Bridging Cultures Program. • Provide students with specific advice to help them function more effectively in their host culture. • Offer language tutoring to our students and arrange cultural/linguistic exchanges between our students and locals. • Arrange cultural activities that promote a cross-cultural exchange and allow our students to observe and participate in local culture.
 Historical ISA encourages our students to have an appreciation of their host country's history, architecture and "Culture." Historical discovery involves education in the rich history of art, architecture, language, music, theatre and dance, and the development within, and influence on, the local and global community. We facilitate this area of discovery by visiting museums, touring monuments and attending performances.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Offer excursions to museums, archaeological sites, monuments, architectural marvels, famous homes, cultural icons and UNESCO Heritage Sites, all with clearly defined learning objectives. • Take students to performances and provide context and history to help them better appreciate what they are seeing and hearing, such as tango in Buenos Aires, or flamenco in Spain.
 Sociopolitical ISA programs intend for students to be well-informed about the sociopolitical reality of their program location. We strive to educate students so they can intelligently discuss important contemporary events. ISA wants students to articulate how current events impact host country nationals' views of domestic and U.S. government policies, along with identifying the main domestic media channels and how they align politically and ideologically.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe local and national media channels and newspapers to help students understand the political/ideological leanings of various channels from a local perspective. • Send students links to selected news stories and provide opportunities for discussion of the contents. All ISA students have access to a New York Times subscription as a part of their ISA program. We also post these stories on social media sites. • Offer excursions that are directly related to sociopolitical issues, such as our excursion to the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) in South Korea; its very existence has enormous geopolitical implications on trade, international security and regional relations.
 Professional ISA empowers students to use their time abroad as a means to explore their professional and career goals. Students receive the Professional Development Toolbox as a resource prior to departure, during their time abroad and after returning from their program. Our mission is to enable students to intelligently leverage their study, internship or service-learning abroad experience when pursuing post-graduate careers or continuing education.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide access to the Professional Development Toolbox for all ISA participants before, during and after their program. The toolbox, located in the student portal, is a cache of multimedia resources designed to help with practical aspects of the job hunt including résumé and cover letter writing tips, interview coaching and advice for how to effectively market their international experience. The utilization of the resources in the toolbox enables students to better articulate how their international experience has enhanced their skillset and how those transferable skills translate into benefits for their potential employer or post-graduate educational institution. • Encourage students to think about how their international experience will give them a competitive advantage in the job market. Students are to set "SMART" goals and to look for ways they can strategically use their time abroad to influence future professional development and career ambitions.
 Environmental ISA provides opportunities for students to visit some of their host country's incredible environmental wonders, as this gives students an appreciation of, and connection with, the natural ecology of the regions in which they are living. We have found that by developing an understanding of their local environment, students feel more comfortable, safe and healthy during their program.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Offer at least one excursion or activity in each location that facilitates the interaction between our students and the natural environment. • Educate students about local resource management procedures. Nearly every ISA office abroad has a recycling program in place, enabling us to promote conservation. • Promote a deeper understanding of the importance of communal spaces, involvement and civic engagement by incorporating a volunteer day as a cultural activity at all ISA sites. During the volunteer day, program participants typically work alongside local residents to beautify a local park or public space.
