

COLLEGE OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

MASTER'S DEGREE - PHYSICIAN ASSISTANT STUDIES

Application and Interview Process (Accreditation Standards A3.13 and A3.14):

Indiana State University is a participant in CASPA (Centralized Application Service for PAs). To apply to our program, you must complete a CASPA application. The CASPA application cycle runs from April to March 1. CASPA applications must be verified by March 1st in order to be considered.

Priority in application review and invitation for interview will be given to those applicants who have completed their CASPA, the supplemental application, and had official GRE scores submitted.

Admission to the ISU PA program is competitive. Each year, the program receives approximately 350 verified applications. The number of applicants interviewed varies each year and 30 students are admitted in January.

Interviews are conducted via a rolling admissions model with decisions made shortly following the completion of each interview. The interview day consists of a 30-minute interview with members of the PA Admissions Committee, along with tours of the ISU campus and other facilities that will be used by PA students.

Applicant scoring is based on a rubric scale that includes, but is not limited to: GPA, GRE scores, healthcare/volunteer experience, Indiana residency, military experience, and clarity of goals in relation to the PA profession. An interview tool of approximately 8 questions is also evaluated and included in the final admission decision.

Each application is evaluated on its own merits. ISU is committed to recruiting and retaining a diverse and well-rounded group of students who represent all facets of society. Applicants are reviewed holistically based on their experience, academic background and potential, leadership ability, and other qualities appropriate to graduate study.

*Note: For the application cycle starting March 4, 2024, the ISU PA Program will no longer require a GRE.
