Capacity limit for events extended

Indiana State University's capacity limit for events and gatherings hosted by ISU departments and offices, or external users, has been extended through the end of the semester.

The university previously issued guidance that these events and gatherings cannot exceed 50 people in attendance, including event organizers and guest speakers.

Originally set to expire on Sept. 30, the guidance has been extended as part of the university's continued efforts to protect campus community members and visitors and slow the spread of COVID-19. This guidance applies to indoor and outdoor events.
