			The 8 week course will explore the concept of 'Black Girl Magic' as encapsulated by CaShawn Thompson, the ways in which individual black girls realize their magic and how they can maintain it. The class will explore the intersectional identity of being young and black and female in the United States through self-definition rather than deficit model thinking. This framework will allow black girls to draw on their critical literacy skills by reading and writing about their individual and collective experiences of being a black girl in today's context. While the course will be directed toward black girls, any student will be welcome to the class. A diverse group of students will enrich the work.

			This class will focus on the Evolution of Folklore and Urban Legends in our current culture. Starting with chain letters and scary stories, we will examine how those things transformed into the memes, e-mail forwards, and creepypastas that are thriving in our digital culture. As a bonus, since we live in a town with great local legends, we will also look at how local legends are affected by bigger urban legend trends.
