Commuter Services Overview

Commuter students comprise roughly 60% of the entire student population at Indiana State University. Whether you live in Terre Haute or a nearby town, at home with your parents or in an apartment just down the street, Commuter Services offers a variety of programs and services to help you connect with the Indiana State University community.

Soup & Substance

In addition to free food, each month a different department or organization is invited to tell commuter students about resources on campus that might be beneficial. Rather than a formal description, this is an informal opportunity for students and staff to connect over food and conversation.

Laptop Lending

Whether you forgot your laptop at home, your computer is being repaired, or you just don’t have one, the Commuter Services Laptop Lending Program can help you.

Students may check out laptop computers—free of charge—at the following locations:

- Commuter Services Office: Laptops at this location may be checked out for extended periods of time. Located in the John W. Moore Welcome Center
- Hulman Memorial Student Union Information Desk: Laptops at this location may be checked out for 4 hours at a time.
Scholarship Opportunity

Commuter Services has a limited number of Commuter Scholarships available for the fall and spring semesters. Students may apply for the scholarship each semester they meet the criteria, via the Branch.

Criteria:
- Live off campus during the semester in which the scholarship would be awarded
- Have a minimum of 30 earned credits hours by the end of the semester that the application is due.
  - As a part of the 30 credit hours, transfer students must have at least 12 ISU earned credit hours
- Maintain good academic and conduct standing

Lounges

The Commuter Connections Lounges, located in Hulman Memorial Student Union and the 2nd floor of the Library, are great places for commuter students to spend time between classes, relax and take a break while on campus, or have lunch.

The Hulman Memorial Student Union lounge features: large TVs, magazines, toaster, microwave, sink, couches, tables, and information about events and happenings on and off campus.

The Cunningham Memorial Library lounge features: desktop computers, study tables, and chairs. This is a great quiet study space!

Housing Fair

The Housing Fair is hosted each spring semester to provide STATE students with the best scope of housing options within the Terre Haute community. Housing, insurance, rental, and real estate vendors are represented at the fair in order to give students a good look at what the community has to offer, without having to run all over town.
Your Housing Fair Resource Page

While visiting with vendors at the Housing Fair, or doing your own research, think about some of the questions below and use the chart to help keep the information you gathered straight!

Questions to Ask Vendors:

☐ What is the average rent at your complex?

☐ How many bedrooms do you offer in your apartments/houses?

☐ Are there designated parking spots for residents?

☐ What is the grace policy on rent?

☐ What is the fee for breaking my lease early?

☐ What security is offered in the complex?

☐ How frequently are the rent rates adjusted?

☐ Are pets allowed? Is there a monthly pet fee?

☐ Can you explain the lease terms to me? Can I have a 10 or 12 month lease?

☐ What are average utility costs?

☐ If I am not living there because of an internship one semester or over the summer, am I allowed to sublease?

Questions to Consider When Moving Off-Campus

When moving off campus there are a lot of things to consider. There are some main questions you should be asking yourself when looking at your options for living off campus:

Money:

• How much can I pay comfortably to live off-campus?
• Have I considered costs that aren’t associated with living on campus like: gas, groceries, and unexpected fees or situations?
• Am I able to manage money and create a budget?
• What utilities will I need to pay for each month? For example: Water, Electricity, Cable, Internet, Sewage, etc.

Living Environment:

• Do I want to live in an apartment or a home? Privately owned or by a company?
• Who would be a possible roommate for me? How many roommates am I willing to have?
• Do I want to live alone?
• Do I want to live in a community with a lot of students, or around families and other non-students?
• Do I have furniture for an apartment or do I need to look for furnished apartments?

Transportation:

• Do I have a car or transportation to campus each day?
• Do I have transportation to campus for night time events or going to study groups or the library?
• Do I have the STATE Public Safety phone number saved in my phone if I want an escort across campus at night? (Their number is: 812-237-5555)

Academics:

• Will I have internet, computer, printer, etc. to complete my academics while at home?
• Will I have a place to study and complete work efficiently in my new home?
Roommates

When moving off campus, roommates can reduce the costs of living dramatically. Not only do they share the costs of rent but they also share the costs of utilities. When choosing roommates you always need to consider the small things. Examples are: visitors, messiness vs. clean freak, bed times, and study times. Your closest friend won’t always be compatible so think through choosing roommates with a clear head. Finding a roommate is an important early process because you will need to agree on what type of apartment or home you both want, what your price range is, and who will pay for what. You may want cable but your roommate says they can’t afford it so you are on your own, but then are you okay with them watching the cable you pay for? These things can be very complicated as you can see and take time and consideration before looking into places to live.

Things to think about when choosing a roommate:

Rent and Utilities
You sign a lease that says the rent must be paid no matter what and the establishment isn’t responsible if one of your roommates doesn’t pay rent. You and your other roommates are now responsible for covering the rent that your roommate did not pay. The same goes for utilities. You put the water in your name and your roommates pay their portion to you. If one roommate decides not to pay and you don’t have the extra money then you could be living without water.

Roommate Agreement
A roommate agreement is a good way to protect yourself when signing on to live with others. There is a roommate contract available to copy and fill out on the next pages of this guide. Roommate Agreements can be written proof of who has agreed to pay what. Although they aren’t legal contracts, they are written proof of a person’s agreement to pay rent and utilities. They can also outline policies about cleanliness, chores, visitors, privacy and other major issues that could cause problems in your living environment.

The roommate who is leaving will still be obligated to the property manager by the terms of the signed lease.

When moving off campus you must think of the big picture. What can you really afford? On top of classes, books, and other expenses, what can you really comfortably pay for an apartment? The first place to start is by creating a budget. Evaluate your current expenses with the resources provided and see what you will be able to afford in the future for a rental property.

Things to consider when look for an affordable place:
- What utilities are included in your rent?
- Are the utilities affordable? (Older facilities may have higher electric bills)
- Are there additional rent fees for having a 10 month lease?
- Is there an increased rent/deposit for pets?
- Are there laundry facilities on site?
- Is cable or internet included?

Affordability Comparison

Use this model to compare the cost of each property you are looking at. Find the property that you can afford, and that meets your needs.

Signing Your Lease

The most important thing to remember before signing a lease is that it is a legal document. When you sign that piece of paper, you are then legally held accountable to uphold the policies, and agreements outlined. Even if you decide not to continue at Indiana State University, your lease legally binds you to pay rent until the end lease date. Many places will allow you to get out of a lease but not without paying heavy fines. There is a positive side, just like you are bound to them, they are also bound to you and have their own responsibilities to you, so the lease protects you as well as them.

There are a few things that you should make sure are discussed and placed in the lease:
• Rent and other things you will be paying for like security or pet deposits and fees
• Maintenance and how repairs to your home will be made
• Circumstances where the landlord is allowed to enter your property
• Policies on roommates, subleasing, and the conditions around them
• General policies that may be a part of your complex or living community

Always remember to read the lease carefully and discuss with the landlord anything you find that you don’t think that you can comply with. Leases are negotiable and can be changed. If you discuss it with your landlord and find common ground on the issue then the change can be made BEFORE you sign anything.

The lease is the ultimate paper trail of what your landlord has agreed to, and you them. Therefore, don’t accept verbal promises or agreements, if your landlord is offering something extra, or offering to change something, let him/her know that you want it in writing. This also applies to things that need to be done to the apartment before your arrival. If the apartment needs repairs or attention before you arrive get it in writing that it will be fixed!

Key Points:

• Read before you sign anything
• Discuss all parts of the lease and what you’re comfortable, and not comfortable, with
• Get all agreements added to the lease or in writing
How Well Do You Know Your New Home?

Before visiting apartments, look them up and see what information you can find on them. The internet has reviews of all businesses when you search them. Of course they vary, but if all reviews are negative then maybe you should reconsider. Reading reviews or talking to friends can be great ways to gather questions to ask the complex or property manager. After gathering your own information and questions here are some other questions you should consider:

- When is rent due each month and is there a grace period?
- Does a deposit guarantee me a spot or place me on a waiting list?
- Do I need a co-signer or proof of income?
- Do I need to put utilities in my name?
- How much have they cost in the past?
- Are there any specials on rent or offers?
- Does the maintenance staff complete things in a timely manner?
- Do more students or families live in the complex or neighborhood?
- How do you handle reported issues with other residents?
- Is there reliable and available parking for residents?
- Do my guests need to park somewhere different?
- Do you change locks between residents?
- Are there any other safety concerns that have come up recently?

Be attentive on your visit to these apartments and properties. Remember that you have to work with the landlord or leasing office for the time that you live there. With that in mind, see if you like them, if you get along, and see if you get a good feeling from the place. Look over the apartment and address any concerns on your visit. Drive or walk around the apartment, as well, to be sure you’re comfortable with the surrounding area.
Moving In

When moving into your new apartment you should keep close documentation of the issues and damages that are already in the apartment. Doing this can protect you from losing your deposit for damages you and your roommates didn’t inflict. Go over the property very carefully and look for even the small things. Make sure all supplied appliances work correctly and check the electricity and light switches in each room. This should preferably be done before any furniture is moved in, and if the damage is significant enough you should take pictures for proof to show your landlord. Photographs of your apartment at the time of moving in can also be beneficial to show the condition to compare at move out.

Make sure that you are keeping records as you move in. Keep copies of your lease, roommate agreements, budgeting, and emergency contacts and numbers. Making a binder or a guide for you and your roommates to have easy access to information you may need will be helpful. Keep your documentation and pictures of the property here as well.

Safety Measures to Consider

- Lock your doors at all times when away from home and have an agreement to this with roommates
- Don’t leave keys in hiding spots
- Do not put your address on your key ring
- Make sure all windows and other methods of entry are locked at all times
- Make sure your house looks lived in when you or roommates are away for breaks. Consider getting a timer for a lamp so your home is lit at typical times.
- Notify friends, neighbors, and your landlord when you will be out of town so they can notice anything suspicious
- Park in lighted areas and as close to your apartment as possible so you can move quickly from your car to apartment at night

How to Be a Good Neighbor

Get to know your neighbors! Building relationships with your neighbors can help them know when something is wrong or when a stranger is at your home. It can also minimize the conflicts that arise between you if you get to know them.

- Introduce yourself to your surrounding neighbors when you move in
- Talk to them occasionally and get to know them
- Let them get to know you and they will more than likely know when something is wrong
- Get their contact information and give them theirs in case of emergency or other issues

Having parties or a lot of people over is bound to happen once in a while. There is nothing wrong with having a get together but respecting your neighbors is important.

- Try and keep noise to a minimum and don’t play loud music or do other things that will obviously disturb your neighbors.
- Let them know you are having a few people over and make sure they have your number so they can call if there is a problem.
- Make sure you are obeying state and federal laws by making sure everyone is 21 or older when alcohol is being openly consumed.
- On the chance that you do get the police called, cooperate and make sure all persons involved are cooperating to save you and your roommates trouble.

Take care of your property! The appearance of your property can say a lot about you.

- If you have a yard make sure it is kept and clean. Don’t leave trash or other tacky materials in sight.
- Make sure the outside of your door, or porch isn’t covered in trash and you keep it picked up.
- Don’t overflow trash on the street or porch and move your trashcan back after trash has been picked up.
- Have appropriate porch and yard furniture and keep it organized and looking nice.
- Don’t let friends take up all the parking and be respectful when parking your vehicle as well.

Remember:
You are a student of Indiana State University and therefore are held accountable by the Student Code of Conduct. Please review it and remember that facing conduct can be supplemental to already being in trouble with the police.
Moving Out

When you decide to move out it is usually in your lease that you must tell your landlord you are doing so. When reading over your lease, make notes of when you must let a landlord know you are leaving. Most leases will indicate how many months or weeks you must give notice. When you let your landlord know, record a final inspection, that way you can be there when they are looking it over and talk about, explain, or remind your landlord of damages that aren’t yours.

Be courteous and aware of your deposit when you are moving out. Make sure you clean the apartment well, and leave it in as good condition, if not better than when you arrived. If you do not clean your apartment you can likely lose money on your deposit when the landlord has to hire someone.

When you move out your landlord is legally obligated to return your deposit to you. Provide your landlord with your new address and a good way to get in touch with you. Make sure to keep the property manager’s number handy in case something goes wrong and you do not get the deposit. If the landlord deducts from your security deposit request a written list of why, and if the list isn’t legitimate then seek legal help in getting your rightful deposit back. Take pictures of the property after you have moved out all of your things so that you can have a comparison to the pictures you took upon moving in. These pictures are another way to prove the actual condition the apartment was in upon your departure.

Don’t forget!

• Return keys, garage openers, gate openers, or any other materials your landlord needs
• Forward your mail to your next address so that you don’t lose any information. Do this at the U.S. Postal Service, or on their website for a small fee.
• Even though your address is forwarded call your bank, and other major bills to inform them of your move so you don’t miss anything important
• Make sure your landlord knows your new address as well to get your security deposit
• Dispose of any furniture, clothing, or other materials you don’t want to local charities like Goodwill or the Habitat Restore.
• If your roommates are not continuing the move with you, work out how your deposit will be split and how the portions will get back to each of you.
