Moratorium on student events, other COVID-19 guidelines extended

A moratorium is in place for in-person, non-academic student events at Indiana State University through February 1, 2021. This includes student or student organization gatherings that occur on campus or off campus.

This moratorium will be reviewed by January 28, 2021. Decisions regarding the status of the moratorium will be based on the prevalence of COVID-19 on campus and in the community, and current public health guidance.

Additional information, including guidelines that must be followed when in-person events resume, is available on the website.

ISU is also extending all other existing COVID-19 precautions and guidance to the spring 2021 semester. Under the guidelines, University-sponsored international travel is still prohibited until further notice and all University-sponsored travel is suspended for the spring semester. Exceptions require approval of a Cabinet member. Students are discouraged from engaging in personal travel except for essential business or emergencies.

Faculty-led study abroad and international alternative break programs are suspended at least through the end of the spring semester. When travel restrictions are lifted, travel is prohibited to countries with Level 3 United States Department of State (DOS) or Centers for Disease Control (CDC) travel advisories worldwide.

Other guidelines around internships, student teaching, clinical experiences, work-based experiences, service-learning, performances, field research, community-based volunteer programs, laboratories, and studios can be found on the Experiential Learning Guidelines page of the ISU website.

Next semester, all Sycamores must continue to follow the safety guidelines that the university put in place to help safeguard everyone against COVID-19. They include the completion of the daily health assessment, social distancing, and wearing of a face covering in all campus buildings and indoor settings, as well as outdoor settings where social distancing cannot be maintained.
